

Summer and Fall 2018 Highlights

Selected for fourth year to the NASPA Lead Initiative and contributed a blog entitled "Reflections on Civic Action and Service-Learning and the New Age College Student" co-authored by Rhonda K. Lewis, Ph.D., MPH and Chelsea Redger-Marquardt, M.S. for November 2018.

Convened a Carnegie Community Engagement Classification exploratory committee and made the decision to apply for the 2025 process.

Selected six new Service-Learning Faculty Scholars representing our largest diversity in academic colleges.

Held the Service-Learning Showcase in Fall 2018, the Spring 2019 Showcase is scheduled for April 24, 2019.

Launched a new Service-Learning Module in VolunteerICT.

SERVICE-LEARNING FACULTY SCHOLARS UPDATE

Wonyoung Kim, Ph.D. College of Applied Studies	Plans to connect with the National Baseball Congress and their 2019 World Serves Event for his Marketing Sport and Physical Activity course in Spring 2019.
Dorothy Harpool College of Business	Plans to implement service-learning into her Design Thinking process for her WSU102 course in connection with the Office of Student Success and The Salvation Army.
Michelle Wallace, MPAS, PA-C College of Health Professions	Plans to continue enhancing PA850- Experiential Learning in Professionalism, Service, Research, and Inter-professional Collaboration with six required service-learning activities selected by the students to meet their learning goals.
Eveline Ndi Kalomo, Ph.D., MSW, MICW Fairmount College of Liberal Arts and Sciences	Plans to create a new course focused on community based issues in Namibia and building partnerships with local NGOs in her home country.
Amy Chesser, Ph.D., M.A. College of Health Professions	Plans to implement service-learning into her Public Health and Aging course. Some community partners will include: a variety of senior living organizations,, hospice, and Alzheimer's Association.
Lori Santos College of Fine Arts	Plans to implement service-learning in her art education courses and connect with area K-12 classrooms and the Kansas Humane Society.

VolunteerICT Highlights

In the past six months Shockers have provided a value of service of $79,211 in the Wichita community. The chart below breaks this down by month.

In the past six months, Shockers have responded to over 1,012 service request through VolunteerICT with September 2018 as the highest.

To see all available data in real time please visit: wichita.galaxydigital.com/portal/

